Nifty Realty Weekly Outlook Showing Continued Weakness Ahead

KEDIA ADVISORY

Chart

Technical Key Insight

- Index breaks below 915 level, signalling renewed bearish sentiment.
- RSI at 42 shows weakening momentum and steady downside pressure.
- MACD bearish crossover confirms sellers dominating the weekly trend.
- "Symmetrical Triangle" suggests likely continuation of the decline.
- Elevated choppiness index indicates high volatility and unstable price movement.

Technical Overview

Looking at the weekly chart, Nifty Realty has slipped further, and the overall tone still appears weak. Prices have moved lower after failing to hold above the upper line of the "Symmetrical Triangle Pattern", and the recent candles show steady selling pressure. In my view, the market is struggling to stay above the 50-period average near 961, while momentum indicators are pointing towards continued downside. Volatility also seems elevated as the choppiness index is showing high readings, which usually hints at unstable price moves.

If we examine the chart closely, the index has broken below the 61.80 percent retracement at 915 and is now trading near 873. This breakdown makes the support at 849 and then 670 quite important to watch. RSI is at 42 and still falling, which tells us that momentum is weakening. Meanwhile, the MACD has already given a bearish crossover, and the histogram bars are turning red, suggesting that sellers still have control. The symmetrical triangle pattern has failed on the upside, and the rejection near point D confirms a shift in sentiment. The 200-period average sits far below near 760.

This trade aligns with the current trend, as momentum and indicators are pointing lower. Keeping the stop above major resistance keeps the risk controlled, while the target remains realistic considering the support zones.

Recommendation: SELL NIFTY REALTY BELOW 870.00 TGT 680.00 SL ABV 920.00 NSE

ANANTRAJ and DLF Showing Pressure in Triangle Patterns and Falling Channel

Technical Key Insight

From what we see on the weekly setup, price has moved below the 50-period moving average, which usually signals that buyers are stepping back. The broader "Symmetrical Triangle Pattern" shows resistance around 614 and strong support closer to 396. RSI staying below 40 tells us that sellers are slowly taking control, and since it is still pointing downward, momentum is not yet showing any signs of recovery. MACD turning bearish with falling histogram bars adds to the negative sentiment.

Volume spikes earlier in the pattern showed interest around certain levels, but the recent declining volume suggests that the current drop is more controlled and not panic-driven, though the overall structure still favors sellers. With the broader triangle narrowing, a deeper move toward the lower support zone looks likely if the price stays below 535.

Recommendation: SELL ANANTRAJ BELOW 507.00 TGT 396.00 SL BELOW 580.00 NSE

Technical Key Insight

Looking at the weekly chart, DLF has slipped again and continues to trade within a broad "Falling Channel Pattern". The price has near the 61.80 percent retracement level of 686, which usually signals that sellers are getting stronger. The Falling Channel structure that has been in place for many months is still intact, and the price is now drifting towards the lower end of the channel. RSI is at 39 and heading down, which suggests momentum is easing further and buyers are not stepping in yet. Meanwhile, the MACD has already given a bearish crossover, and the histogram is staying negative, confirming that sellers are currently in control. The next important support sits at 610-600. On the upside, 750 remains a key resistance area where the 50-period average is also placed, and price has repeatedly failed to hold above this zone.

This setup matches the ongoing weak momentum and the structure of the falling channel.

Recommendation: SELL DLF BELOW 695.00 TGT 600.00 SL BELOW 750.00 NSE
